2010 Team America Rocketry Challenge Award

This award goes to a team of three juniors who participated in the Team America Rocketry Challenge over the past year. This is the second time a team from SHA has competed in this $60,000 rocket design contest. More than 650 teams from across the US compete. The challenge is to design, build and fly a model rocket - with a raw egg as payload - to achieve specific height, time and recovery goals. The SHA team did very well but did not get chosen for the fly-off contest in Washington, DC. They plan to try again next year.

We congratulate these girls on their effort and wish them luck with next year's contest:
